You know you’ve been in Finland too long, when...

* Your coffee consumption exceeds 8 cups a day.

* Silence is fun.

* Your native language has seriously deteriorated. Now you "eat medicine", "open the television", and "close the lights off".

* You associate pea soup with Thursday.

* After a presentation, you finally stop asking "Are there any questions?"

* You no longer eat mashed potatoes - you eat smashed potatoes.

* You no longer look at a track suit as casual wear, but consider it acceptable for formal occasions. Neither do you see a problem wearing white socks with loafers.

* You understand why the Finnish language has no future tense.

* When a stranger smiles at you, you assume he is drunk, insane, or American.
